Standard news article:

For almost a decade, the European Urban Resilience Forum (EURESFO) has served as an exchange platform for city representatives, experts and stakeholders from the local and regional stage to discuss and strategise on adapting to climate change, building urban resilience, and managing disasters. The unique event has provided an exceptional platform for governments from across Europe and abroad to explore future opportunities for collaboration.

EURESFO is a European initiative driven by ICLEI Local Governments for Sustainability and the European Environment Agency (EEA), and this year will be co-organised by the City of Athens (Greece). All local and regional governments seeking to shape a climate-resilient future are once again invited to take part in the discussion and meet up in Athens on 14 and 15 September (Venue: Technopolis City of Athens). Registration is now open.

Some topics that will be highlighted in the 2022 programme are: coastal resilience, tackling heat waves and wildfires, disaster risk reduction for safer and healthier communities, regional pathways towards resilience transformation, nature-based solutions for equitable development and many more!

The event will keep its informative, open and interactive character, maintaining its 'PowerPoint free' format. Participants are encouraged to share experiences and points of view on a variety of topics that will explore challenges in urban resilience planning and implementation

Stay tuned on the EURESFO website and follow the Twitter account @Urb_Resilience for all the latest updates and programme announcements for #EURESFO22, and don't forget to register here.
